“ I was one of the many college students who worked at M&M Mars during the summer months, to earn money for my college tuition. Mr. Titsworth was always so nice to the college students, me included. Pleasant memories of him. May he now be happy and fulfilled. God bless him and may the Angels be with him.

“ My Condolences To The Family,

One of the most comforting is the promise that life is continuous;

our time on earth is just one aspect of a soul's journey of growth and transformation through time.

Not only will we meet our loved one again beyond the veil we know as physical death, but our relationship with them will continue as well.

One of the greatest gifts we can give to someone who has passed on is to pray for them.

And most importantly, to pray that they will recognize that they have moved on from earthly life, and now have the opportunity to continue their soul development in a different way.

The One's we love on the other side are actually as close to us as our thoughts, and we can be most helpful to those individuals by focusing on the happy, joyful times together, and releasing – as much as we can – the sadness and grief we feel at their passing.
